Schools Division Superintendent

Dear Madam:

In recent years, some schools of education have charted a new direction of programs and used innovative approaches to content and instructional strategies and field experiences to address new priorities for organizational performance. This direction has given our teachers and educators an opportunity to shift from the organizations' old practice of discouraging individuals to display innovative behavior to valuing innovative thinking as a potentially powerful influence in organizational achievement. The same direction has also made our education policy framers realize the value of research to various areas of education from instruction to management.

We believe that this direction should be supported by a model of faculty development anchored on training. And so we invite teachers, school heads and supervisors to attend the following events:
